

Isaias Hernandez (Environmental Activist/Influencer)

Founder of Queer Brown Vegan, a highly followed web and social media platform, Isaias Hernandez is a Mexican American climate and environmental educator and influencer. As a result of his experiences with environmental injustices in the community where he grew up, Isaias chose to develop an environmental education page which emphasizes the intersectionality of social justice and the environment, focusing on topics that are not often covered in environmental work.

His journey to deconstruct complex issues, while centering diversity and authenticity, has resonated with a worldwide audience. He also collaborates with other leaders from the private and public sectors to uplift and produce stories of change for his independent web series, Sustainable Jobs and Teaching Climate Together.

Isaias has been featured in several noteworthy publications, including Vogue, The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Guardian, and Business Insider. His social media advocacy earned him recognition as a top climate content creator by Harvard C-CHANGE. As a public speaker, he's presented for The New York Times, Nike, UC Berkeley, Billie Eilish's Overheated Summit, Harvard University, and others.
